INTRODUCTION

Data Collection Description

The Juvenile Defendants in Criminal Courts (JDCC) sample is an independent sample drawn from the State Court Processing Statistics 1998 series. The State Court Processing sample - see Felony Defendants in Large Urban Counties, 1998 at <http://www.ojp.usdoj.gov/bjs/abstract/fdluc98.htm> - presents data collected from a representative sample of felony cases filed in the Nation's 75 largest counties during May 1998. The cases are prospectively tracked for one year to present a complete description of the processing of felony defendants. The description includes demographic characteristics, prior arrests and convictions, current arrest charges, criminal justice status at the time of the arrest, type of pretrial release or detention, bail amount, court appearance record, adjudication outcome, and sentence received if convicted. Within each sampled site, data were gathered on each juvenile felony case. Cases were tracked through adjudication or for up to 1 year.

Data Collection and Methodology

The JDCC data collection involved a two stage process. First, 40 counties were selected from a roster of the Nation's 75 largest counties based on population. Nineteen states contributed counties to the sample, however, the counties were not selected to be representative of their respective state. These counties were initially intended to be a representative sample of the Nation's 75 largest counties but due to several counties dropping out without systematic replacement, the collection of counties became a non-probabilistic sample which cannot be generalized to the universe of 75 counties. The second step was to capture data on each case in the selected counties in which a juvenile was charged with a felony in that county's criminal court of general jurisdiction (adult court). For each selected county, all such cases filed in 1998 were included in the study. Each case was tracked through to adjudication and sentencing, or for at least one year. In total, data were collected on 7,135 juvenile felony defendants. The varying number of cases in each county can reflect population size and composition, different state laws regarding the treatment of juveniles in criminal courts, local prosecutorial practices, and the general level of relevant criminal activity.

File Structure

The JUVENILE DEFENDANTS IN CRIMINAL COURTS (JDCC): SURVEY OF 40 COUNTIES IN THE UNITED STATES, 1998 data file is available from the ICPSR in single record per case format and has a logical record length (LRECL) of 1,348. There are 197 variables on 7,135 cases.

A raw character data file, machine-readable codebook, and SPSS and SAS data definition statements have been prepared for this collection. The SPSS statement file contains four statements: data list, variable labels, value label, and missing values statements. The SAS statements file contains five statements: proc format, input, label, format, and missing value recode statements.

ICPSR Processing Information

The data collection was processed according to the standard ICPSR processing procedures. The data were checked for illegal or inconsistent code values. No consistency checks were performed.

Juveniles Defendants in Criminal Courts JDCC database variable definitions

The source used to identify the upper age for juveniles and the filing mechanism appropriate to each state was the OJJDP publication, Trying Juveniles as Adults in Criminal Court: An Analysis of State Transfer Provisions, December 1998. Individual statutes were reviewed where necessary for clarification purposes.

The source used to identify the facility where juveniles prosecuted as adults are held pretrial was the BJA publication, Juveniles in Adult Prisons and Jails: A National Assessment, October 2000. Individual statutes were reviewed where necessary for clarification purposes.

JUVENILE

The upper age for juveniles differs across the states. Nineteen states are represented in the 40 sites (39 counties and the City of Baltimore) participating in the JDCC project. Of the 40 sites, 25 have an age limit of under18, nine sites have an age limit of under17, and six sites have an age limit of under16. (UNDER18, UNDER17, UNDER16)

AGE

Juvenile status is measured by the age at time of offense. In the JDCC study there are two age categories, one at time of filing in the criminal court and the other at time of arrest. If in either of the age categories the defendant was under the statutorily defined upper age limit, the case was retained in the JDCC study. If however, there were cases where the age was found to be over the statutorily defined upper limit for both age at filing and age at arrest, an offense date was sought. Only those cases in which the defendant was a juvenile at time of offense were retained in the JDCC study. (AGEFILE, AGEARR)

FILING DATE

The JDCC project is intended to track case processing events in cases involving juvenile defendants being adjudicated in criminal courts. Therefore, the criterion for case selection is the first court event in the criminal court system. The concept of first court event in such cases did not have a universal definition. Rather, a variety of events comprised the concept of "filing date." For some sites, the first court event was the initial appearance in the criminal court (usually lower court), in other sites the initial appearance was in the trial court because as a matter of policy waived cases were transferred directly into the upper court. In yet other sites, the filing date was the date the prosecutor's office filed to transfer a case to the criminal court or when charges were filed that automatically (via statute) brought the case before a criminal court. Therefore, in the JDCC study the filing date represents different events (usually with not more than one or two days difference among them), depending on the site. (FILEDATE)

ARREST DATE

The arrest date was sought to determine the actual length of the case. For cases that began in the juvenile justice system the arrest date would represent the date of the original arrest. In this way, for waived or transferred cases to the criminal court the arrest date would capture juvenile as well as criminal court activity. For cases that originated in the criminal court the arrest date would also reflect the actual length of the case. By design there would be two types of arrest dates depending on the filing mechanism (whether transferred from juvenile court or originating in criminal court). For many, if not most, of the sites, the arrest date for transferred or waived cases was for the most recent arrest (the arrest that brought the case to the criminal court) as opposed to the original arrest. An additional complication emerged when the arrest date represented the date the warrant of arrest was issued as opposed to when it was actually served. (ARREST)

ANCHOR DATE

Given the inconsistent definitions of filing and arrest dates, for purposes of measuring intervals between events for the JDCC project, the date – filing or arrest – that either represented the first court event in the criminal court or came the closest to representing that event was designated the anchor date. In those sites where only one date was available, it became the anchor date. In those sites where the arrest date represented the original arrest in waived or transferred cases, the filing date was selected as the anchor date. In those sites where the arrest date represented arrest warrant issuance rather than execution, the filing date was selected as the anchor date. In those sites where the filing date represented when the prosecutor’s office filed charges and the arrest followed, the arrest date was selected as the anchor date. (ANCHOR)

FILING MECHANISM

The mechanism by which cases involving juveniles are filed in the criminal court system is statutorily defined in each state. There are states that allow only one mechanism and others that allow two or more. There are three basic types of filing mechanisms. Judicial waiver refers to a case whereby a juvenile judge finds, after a hearing, that the child should be tried in the criminal court. Direct filing refers to a case that meets certain statutory criteria whereby a county prosecutor may bring a criminal prosecution against a juvenile or file in the juvenile court. Statutory exclusion refers to a case that meets certain statutory criteria whereby a county prosecutor must file a criminal prosecution (i.e., the case is excluded from juvenile court jurisdiction).

In most sites, different lists were generated for those cases that arrived at the criminal court by way of a judicial waiver or transfer from the juvenile court and those that were directly or by virtue of a statutory exclusion filed in the criminal court. All forms for which the filing mechanism did not conform to the state statute (either because the filing mechanism was not allowed or was not allowed for a particular charge offense) were checked to make sure the mechanism was correctly identified. There were several reasons why “don’t know” was checked as a response to what filing mechanism was used in certain cases. “Don’t know” was checked if the case was known not to be a waived case, but the local coder could not identify the mechanism. “Don’t know” was checked if the local coder indicated a response that was not statutorily allowed and could not explain why that certain mechanism was recorded in the court database.

Many states also have a provision specific to juveniles who have had previous involvement in the criminal justice system known as “once an adult, always an adult.” These involve juveniles who had a previous case filed in the criminal court or those who previously had been found guilty of a crime (usually felony) in the criminal court. For the JDCC study the filing mechanism was recorded as “statutory exclusion” for cases fitting this category. There was an exception to this coding for states that have a “once an adult always an adult” provision with the condition that the person had to have been convicted as an adult (and not merely waived or transferred to the criminal court). Unless the form indicated that the person had a prior conviction as an adult, the filing mechanism would be checked as “don’t know.” Because the prior record question asks if the person had a prior adult arrest or conviction, the only indication of a conviction as an adult is the question concerning the defendant’s relationship to the adult criminal justice system at time of offense. If the response was “on probation” or “on parole” and the case met the other criteria, the filing mechanism would be checked as statutory exclusion.

Provisions for reverse waiver, whereby a case that is filed for criminal prosecution is transferred, after a hearing, to juvenile court are treated as a type of adjudication for purposes of the JDCC study and not as a filing mechanism. This is so because the reverse waiver is a subsequent event following the original rationale for filing the case in criminal court. (FILEMECH)

PRETRIAL DETENTION FACILITY

Where juveniles whose cases are being prosecuted in criminal court are held pending case disposition is a matter of both statutory provisions and local policies. In those states that allow housing these juveniles in juvenile facilities once they reach the age of majority, most have the policy of transferring them to adult facilities. Therefore, pending the disposition of the case being tracked for the JDCC study, the defendant may be housed in more than one facility. The defendant may start the case being housed in a juvenile facility and then be transferred to the adult facility.

For JDCC purposes, the question regarding where the defendant was detained pending the disposition of the JDCC case, was intended to record the facility at which most of the time was spent. It is difficult to gauge if the response provided recorded this intent of the question or simply the facility at which the defendant was first or last detained. In some sites the physical location of the defendant could be tracked between facilities and indeed other institutions, such as hospitals and mental health wards. In other jurisdictions only one location was indicated. Statutes regarding place or facility of pretrial detention of juveniles prosecuted as adults were reviewed for all 19 states in the project. Independent sources in each of the 40 counties were sought for any local policies regarding the place or facility of pretrial detention of juveniles prosecuted as adults. This inquiry included the placement of such juveniles within an adult jail (i.e., as part of or separated from the general adult population) if such an option was allowed or indeed mandated by the statute. Any responses that did not conform to the state statute or the local policy were checked for accuracy. If it was difficult to discern where the juvenile was detained, “don’t know” was checked. If it was known that persons are held in the jail but whether they were detained integrated in or separate from the general adult population was unknown, “population unknown” was checked. (WDET)

JUVENILE FACILITY SENTENCE

Most jurisdictions did not distinguish between a juvenile facility and an adult facility for purposes of imprisonment (i.e., under the State Department of Corrections). In some states the prison term is to be served in a juvenile facility until the person reached 18 years of age and perhaps up to age 21 before being transferred to an adult facility, if necessary, to serve out the term of the sentence. In other states the juvenile who is convicted as an adult is sentenced to an adult prison. In the case of persons who are convicted as Youthful Offenders they are sentenced to serve in specially designated Youthful Offender facilities or units of adult prisons. For the most part the distinctions were not captured in the responses. For all these responses, whether prison, juvenile facility or Youthful Offender facility, the convicted person was to serve a term of incarceration under the authority of the state Department of Corrections.

JDCC Footnote Explanations

Please Note – Missing information for certain items is attributable to the differences between the Building Blocks for Youth (BBFY) form and the Juvenile Defendants in Criminal Courts (JDCC) form.

FILING/ARREST TO RELEASE (NEGATIVE DAYS)

When the anchor date corresponded to the filing date (initial appearance date) there were cases in which the defendant was released prior to the initial appearance. This resulted in the interval between anchor and release date being negative. Defendants could be released prior to initial appearance for usually for one of two reasons. First, the site allowed for delegated release authority (to a pretrial program). Second, the defendant posted bail according to a bail schedule used by the police or jail prior to an appearance before a judicial officer. (ANCH_REL)

TOTAL CHARGES

The four counties of New York City – Bronx, King, New York, and Queens – were unable to provide any charges beyond 1 for the Building Blocks Study. These were marked as “don’t know.” Instead of “don’t know” total charges could be coded as 1 because at a minimum there was one charge. (TOTCHGS)

RACE & HISPANIC/LATINO ORIGIN

In most, if not all, jurisdictions, the categories of race and ethnicity were mutually exclusive. Namely, a person was identified as being Black, White or Hispanic/Latino. If the person was identified as Hispanic/Latino then Race is unknown. If the person was identified as Black, White, Asian or some other race, then the person was identified as not being Hispanic/Latino. (The responses to the Race item in the BBFY form reflect this categorization.)

While on-site for data collection purposes, we noted that the public record of a person’s race or ethnicity was not accurate. For example, persons of East Indian or Pakistan background, who should be considered Asian, were most likely categorized as white but sometimes as black. Persons with Spanish surnames were most often categorized as Hispanic/Latino but in some jurisdictions they were categorized as white. Asians were categorized in some jurisdictions as other. (RACE, HISP)

RELATIONSHIP TO CRIMINAL JUVENILE & ADULT CRIMINAL JUSTICE SYSTEMS

The “none” response to the question about the defendant’s relationship to the adult criminal justice system at time of arrest for the instant case and the defendant’s relationship to the juvenile justice system at time of arrest for the instant case was recoded. As designed, the “none” response was a dummy variable; it was recoded into a variable that indicated whether there was any relationship, no relationship, or relationship unknown. (RELADULT, RELJUV)

PRIOR RECORD INFORMATION

The BBFY form only asked about a person's record of juvenile arrests or convictions prior to the instant case. JDCC asked about a person's record of adult arrests or convictions prior to the instant case in addition to the prior juvenile record. Most of the missing information for the prior adult arrest or convictions item is attributable to BBFY forms.

The item about a defendant's prior failure to make court appearances in the BBFY form only asked in reference to a person's record of juvenile arrests or convictions prior to the instant case. The item in the JDCC form was asked in reference to both the prior juveniles and a person's record of adult arrests or convictions prior to the instant case. Most of the missing information for the prior failure to make court appearances item is attributable to BBFY forms.

(JUVPRIOR, ADPRIOR, FTAPRIOR)

RELEASE/DETENTION INFORMATION

To the responses to the non-financial conditional/supervised release conditions provided on the form – drug treatment, pretrial program, and third party custody (CONDSUP DRUGMON, PSAPROG, THIRDPAR) – were added the following responses: electronic monitoring release and home confinement. Both of these refer to being confined to the home with special conditions such as curfews and restrictions of movement. It is unknown whether electronic monitoring is part of home confinement release. (ELECTRON, HOMECONF)

SPECIAL CASE ADJUDICATION INFORMATION

The BBFY form did not have a Date of Transfer item. Most of the missing information for the Date of Transfer item is attributable to BBFY forms. (SPECDATE)

To the response for special court assignment – drug court – already provided to the question about whether the case was assigned to a special court or calendar, the following other responses were added: expedited court, youthful/juvenile offender court, and homicide/sexual assault court. The expedited court and the homicide/sexual assault court are both special calendar courts and do not involve special treatment in lieu of prosecution or of a sentence of incarceration. The Juvenile Offender Court is a special division of court in New York City that handles cases of juveniles prosecuted as adults. (SPECTYPE)

ADJUDICATION TYPE

Text responses to “other type of adjudication” were categorized into the following responses: adjudicated delinquent, Youthful Offender, Guilty but Insane, Transferred to Another Agency or Jurisdiction, Death of Defendant, and Guilty-type Unknown.

Youthful offender is s designation of a person who is sentenced by a criminal court (not a juvenile court) and placed in the custody of the Department of Corrections in a facility separate from adults or especially for persons under a certain age. In Jefferson County, Alabama, no information was provided for persons convicted as youthful offenders. Information expunged from the criminal court database included date of adjudication, date of sentencing and the specific sentence imposed. In Florida, persons convicted as youthful offenders usually had information about adjudication and sentencing dates but not the specific sentence imposed.

To be adjudicated delinquent refers to a juvenile not having a record of a conviction in the criminal court. It refers to a finding of delinquency by the criminal court judge and the imposition of a juvenile court sanction. (ADJTYPE)

SENTENCING INFORMATION

Restitution was removed as a condition of probation because restitution was not imposed exclusively as a condition of probation. Persons who received sentences strictly of incarceration also had restitution imposed. (RESTITUT)

A separate “restitution-fine” category was created exclusively for California jurisdictions. In California a restitution-fine of $200 (although on occasion a greater amount) was imposed in addition to other sentence types. It was not a fine per se and it was not restitution to the victim, but rather to a Victims’ Fund. (RESTFINE)

To the responses of restitution, community service, electronic monitoring, and treatment (RESTITUT, COMMSERV, ELECMON, TREATMT) other responses were added based on categorization of “other conditions of probation” responses. These were: intensive probation, juvenile probation sentence, anger management/domestic violence counseling, GED or completion of high school, drug testing evaluation, counseling, and other conditions such as curfew, no alcohol, drugs or weapons and other conditions of probation. There were six cases that did not fall into the other categories; these included writing letters of apology to the victim; touring the jail; and seeking employment. (INTPROP, JUVPROB, ANGER, GED, DRUGTEST, COUNSEL, CURFEW, PROBOTH)

To the responses of time served, jail, minimum prison, maximum prison, and juvenile facility other responses were added based on categorization of “other” sentence. These were: boot camp, driver’s license suspension, youthful offender sentence, sex offender registration, community control/weekend sentence. (BOOTCAMP, JUVSANC, SEXOFFEN, COMMCONTR)

COURT APPEARANCE INFORMATION

The BBFY form did not ask if a defendant failed to appear more than once in the instant case. Most of the missing information for the “Did the defendant fail to appear more than once” item is attributable to BBFY forms.

The BBFY form did not ask if a defendant remained a fugitive. Most of the missing information for the “Did the defendant remain a fugitive” item is attributable to BBFY forms.
